Chapter 5 by Ope Lle (yt)JK

As the night past there was no sleep to be found. They nightmares kept on telling me to kill my family. For the last two weeks I could not sleep every time I dozed off they would start screaming in my ears. They were never silent a constant moaning comes from one of them, most of the rest of the demons were always telling me to kill someone or kill something.

Chapter 6 by The Author

The noises got louder and louder until i couldn't tell any of them apart.A symphony of lies and evil thoughts,"ENOUGH" and there it was my unlikely savior the creature with no eyes and the mutilated limbs.The other nightmares vanished and then my savior looked at me,somewhere inside my mind i heard a female voice that sounded strangely familiar..... it reminded my of pancakes and laughter,"Rest now child for the peace you seek will set you on a hard path filled with many trials and mysterious beings,not all of them friendly or honest."

I should have felt fear but instead an odd and warm calm spread across my body and for the first time since I could remember i didn't hear the nightmares voices damn them all. Tomorrow's dangers would be dealt with later but for tonight i will take this peaceful rest given to me by a creature that seem's strangely familiar and fills me with a sense of guilt.

"I forgive you"

Chapter 7 by EmmaK

That night I rested and felt safer than ever before. Were the demons still there the next morning? Yes, of course they were. But they were faint and less frequent. It was like something was with them, making me someone other than myself.

Chapter 8 by josie

I wanted to know what creature or angel was protecting me, but her face would not seem to show. Some days she would go away, I would know because the demons came back, telling me to kill myself. That was a new topic. So, I took it into consideration, the voices would be gone, right?
